How a yellow envelope saves an hour in time of need

EVERY morning, into the mail room of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, pours a flood of mail equal to that handled by the city of Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Among the tons of mail will be some 1200 to 1500 yellow envelopes. If it were necessary to open these yellow envelopes and classify their contents, at least an hour would be lost ... at a time when every hour is precious.

But there is no need to open them. The color says that someone insured in Metropolitan has passed away... and that someone else is left behind, faced with the extraordinary and immediate expenses that always accompany death.

So the yellow envelope takes precedence over all incoming mail. Unopened, it is hurried to the proper department, where the claim, when verified, is immediately put through for payment.

That is one of the reasons why, in the vast majority of all death claims, Metropolitan is able to mail the insurance check on or before the second day following receipt of the claim.

Incomplete or inaccurate information accounts for nearly all cases of delay. Last year, less than one-third of 1% of the claims reached the courts. Legal defense was undertaken only when necessary to protect the interests of the other policyholders and beneficiaries.

The truth is that life insurance companies wish to pay every claim promptly. But competent management and system, as well as sound financial structure, are necessary to make that wish come true.

Advertising Men Listen to Experts on Public Relations

Conference Held Its Midyear Meeting in New York This Week

NEW YORK—"Advertising is the sparkplug to mass distribution and production," stated Bruce Barton, U. S. congressman and the chairman of the board, Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborne Advertising Agency, at the mid-year meeting of the Insurance Advertising Conference held here Tuesday. "The economic system of any country can survive only through expansion," he continued, "and for the last 10 years this country has been consuming its own capital."

Has Not Been Throttled

He pointed out that the insurance business would not have grown to its present size had it been formed by a group of bureaucrats and held down as business is today. The trouble with the country now, Mr. Barton stated, is that the standard of living is raised only by prodding. While a great believer in insurance himself, the speaker asked how many people would buy insurance until the actual need of it had been brought upon them if they were not stimulated by advertising and proper solicitation. This is not enough incentive for people to go ahead on their own, he said.

"There is an energy of youth waiting to go forward and there is money to be used," he added. "But there is not the proper atmosphere to encourage this progress." The expansion of economy will have to come from the initiative and ingenuity of youth looking to the future, he said. Long distance planning is needed and advertising must play a great part in this planning, Mr. Barton concluded.

Ray Dreher Presides

Ray Dreher, Boston & Old Colony, and president of the I. A. C., opened the meeting which was well attended. D. C. Gibson, Maryland Casualty, and chairman of the program committee, spoke briefly on the tremendous force of public opinion on business today and presented that subject as the theme of the conference. "Insurance has its great opportunity today for the way of thought is for security rather than riches," said Glenn Griswold, public relations counsel and former editor of "Business Week." The events of the past seven years have brought the public to the front very prominently in directing the operations of industries. The public relations problem is one that needs the immediate attention of the leaders of industry if they are to avoid legislative regulation. He advised concentration on customer research. "Sell your merchandise, your personnel and your service," the speaker

Warns Against Wrecking Programs by Bank Loans

NEW YORK — Policyholders who borrow money from banks on their life insurance policies rather than dealing direct with the companies in the usual manner are very likely letting themselves in for much more trouble and complication than they realize, according to Isidor Hirschfeld, of the W. H. Bender agency of the National Life of Vermont in New York City. Mr. Hirschfeld who is a member of the Million Dollar Round Table is known for his untiring activity in the interests of his clients. He has gone thoroughly into the bank loan situation from the point of view of the policyholder.

While the general decline in interest rates since the onset of the depression caused a number of banks to go after policy loan business several years ago, offering more attractive rates than the usual 6 percent guaranteed in the policy, it is comparatively recently that this type of loan has been sought on an extensive scale in the New York City area. One firm of money brokers, for example, offers a 2½ percent rate where the loan is $25,000 or more. One argument that has been used is that the saving in interest permits the purchase of term insurance to cover the amount of the loan, thereby keeping the full protection in force.

Absolute Assignment Usual

It is Mr. Hirschfeld's belief that if all policyholders contemplating borrowing from a bank on their policies were fully acquainted with all angles they would hesitate to take the step. Aside from the usual reasons against borrowing on one's life insurance by any method whatever Mr. Hirschfeld points out that the bank loan requires, in most cases, an absolute assignment of the policy or policies. This means that the bank takes over the proceeds if the loan is still unpaid after the assured's death and then pays to the widow whatever portion of the proceeds exceeds the loan.

This, of course, means wrecking any program of settlement options for a bank would, in making the loan, refuse to agree to any arrangement whereby the proceeds would be paid in other than a lump sum settlement. Even assuming it might be willing to take back the share of proceeds which the bank returns to the widow, there is grave doubt that the life company could legally accept this money to hold and pay out under the policy options.

Court Fights Loom

While most banks insist on an absolute assignment of policies, some are willing to accept a collateral assignment. Under such an assignment, the check for the proceeds would be made payable to the widow and the bank jointly, thereby bringing up the possibility that the widow would refuse to recognize the bank's interest, balk at endorsing the check and throw the whole matter before the courts.

Another angle cited by Mr. Hirschfeld is that where a beneficiary is named in the policy, the practice is frequently to change the beneficiary and make the policy payable to the estate. This, of course, places the proceeds in jeopardy in case the estate should be in financial difficulties at the time the policyholder died. Even where the named beneficiary is continued in the policy, the banks insist on eliminating minor and contingent beneficiaries so that there will be no question of having to deal with them as parties at interest. While the practice is not general, at least one company will change the beneficiary, not for the entire amount of the policy, but to the extent of evidence of indebtedness to the assignee. However, it must be remembered that even in such cases the assignment makes the policy liable for all debts of the insured to the assignee, including business debts or any other claim the bank might have against the insured.

Outlines Typical Case

Mr. Hirschfeld outlined a hypothetical case as follows:

"Assume that an insured has $100,000 of insurance in five companies, all of these policies having been properly arranged under the optional modes of settlement, which provide for income to the wife and children (minors) for educational funds, for emergency funds, for sums available to the children at certain ages. It includes a spendthrift clause and further provides that the children are to be the contingent beneficiaries on the death of their mother."

"Now let us assume that the entire estate of this man is limited or nil, and that the insurance is the major or total estate. The total cash value in his policies is $15,000 or $20,000 and he pays the insurance companies 6 percent on such loans. This man is not at all pleased with the amount of interest he has to pay. A representative of some bank calls on him and tells him he can borrow the amount of the loan at 3½ or 4 percent. All he has to do is assign his policies. Here the problem arises, because in transferring the loan from the insurance company to a private institution he becomes debtor from a credit angle. When he borrowed on his life insurance he did not have to report that loan as a debt when filling out a financial statement. Now that he is transferring his loan he signs a note and gives his life insurance as collateral, though he probably does not appreciate what he is doing, because most people either do not read or do not understand what they sign. By reason of this change he would have to report this debt on a financial statement."

Liable for Further Loans

"The insured may have borrowed other moneys from the bank for the usual business requirements, which did not require insurance protection. However, by this change, all his personal insurance has now been made subject to loans, including personal and business obligations at the bank. The method of the change is of tremendous importance. Is it to be an absolute assignment, a collateral assignment, or a change of beneficiary?"

"Let us assume that he has the fol-

Uncertainty As to Effect of Taxing Municipal Bonds

Might Boost or Depress Yield, Depending on Method Used

NEW YORK — Widespread uncertainty prevails as to just what effect the removal of the tax exemption feature—when and if it is put through—will have on municipal securities. This classification, which includes state and county bonds as well, has bulked increasingly large in life company portfolios, both in dollar volume and in percentage of total assets. Companies of the Life Presidents association currently hold approximately $1,475,000,000 of state, county and municipal bonds, or 5.8 percent of total assets. Fraternal orders are also heavy investors in municipal bonds.

A prominent marketer of municipals recently sent out a questionnaire to a number of representative institutional municipal bond buyers, very largely insurance companies and fraternal, to get an opinion as to the probable effect of removal of the tax exemption feature. Only a few offered any definite estimate, the rest of the replies indicating that there are so many variables to be considered that no estimate could be made. The average of those replying was to the effect that the increase in yield due to absence of the tax exempt feature would be from one-half to three-quarters of 1 percent. However, these estimates are not sufficiently numerous or sufficiently representative to be in any sense conclusive.

Two Possibilities Open

Two entirely different possibilities face the holders of municipal bonds, depending on whether existing bonds would be definitely exempted from tax or whether they would be subject, at least potentially, to income tax. It is to clear up this uncertainty that there is a widespread demand to have the tax exempt feature abolished by constitutional amendment rather than by having Congress pass a law.

The reasoning back of this is that if the United States Supreme Court were to recognize Congress' power to tax future issues of municipal securities, it would thereby recognize Congress' power to tax existing issues also and Congress' not doing so would be merely a matter of grace. There would be no obstacle in the way of a future Congress making all existing bonds taxable. Recognition by the Supreme Court of the constitutionality of such an action on the part of Congress would mean the recognition of federal taxation of all municipal revenues. The amendment method, on the other hand, could be so limited as to grant the power of taxing income from future municipal issues without going beyond this aim.

Some Observations on the Commissioners Meeting

By C. M. CARTWRIGHT

The National Association of Insurance Commissioners was able at its recent Des Moines meeting to iron out some of the differences centering largely about convention examinations. There has been considerable feeling on part of commissioners in the far west and some in the south that sufficient cooperation had not been given by New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut. The point was made that Commissioner Harrington of Massachusetts, Commissioner Blackall of Connecticut and Superintendent L. H. Pink of New York had not called convention examinations of their companies as they should. Therefore, a petition was presented to the examinations committee demanding that convention examinations of 34 companies be called and the assignments of participants be made by the chairman of the committee so that there would be comprehensive examinations. The feeling was heightened to a great extent by charges that were made back and forth, both orally and in print.

Zone System from the East

It must be remembered that the present zone system is an eastern product. It was originated by Deputy Commissioner Gough of New Jersey. It was intended to refine the convention system and to give a larger voice in examinations to those states that felt they were outside the pale. Therefore, coming from a conservative state and a conservative commissioner, state officials from a distance feel that it should have whole-hearted support. Evidently Mr. Blackall and Mr. Harrington were able to convince the commissioners that they were sincerely in favor of the system and, while there had been delay in calling examinations, there would be action in the future. Therefore, so far as Massachusetts and Connecticut were concerned, the complaining commissioners were willing to give them another trial.

Inasmuch as they had, therefore, to withdraw the names of the Connecticut and Massachusetts companies, it seemed desirable to withdraw the entire petition. However, it was voted to have President F. N. Julian of Alabama appoint a special committee to deal with Superintendent Pink of New York on controversial matters that come up over examinations, the personnel being Harrison of Arkansas, chairman; Williams of Mississippi, Bowles of Virginia, Sullivan of Washington and Newbauer of Indiana, none of them "lame ducks," it will be noted.

This committee evidently is to watch the New York examination procedure and, if Superintendent Pink does not call in outside states, then Major Harrison's committee is to take the matter up with him. Furthermore, if the outside commissioners think that certain New York companies should be examined, Superintendent Pink will be approached. Evidently many of the commissioners take with a grain of salt Mr. Pink's contention that, owing to the civil service law applying to examiners, he cannot follow the convention system as other states can.

The New York department has a very efficient battery of examiners, all under civil service. They are paid well. New York does not examine companies from other states. It takes the position that every home department should be responsible for its companies, so far as examinations are concerned.

The upshot of the Des Moines meeting has been to crystallize opinion and probably clear the atmosphere considerably. There were some very sharp remarks made, some charges and counter charges, the good faith of some were impugned, but at the end the spirit was friendly and the general feeling was that the situation had been cleared. States having competent examiners are fearful of political accountants being used by states that do not have their own regular force, and very often the usefulness of these outside examiners is questioned. Furthermore, the point is made that too much is charged for these examiners. Commissioner Pew of Iowa endeavored to have a maximum charge of $15 a day made as a fee, with maximum sustenance of $7.50 a day, plus railroad charges, but in view of the compromise his plan was withdrawn. His scheme required examiners to be residents of the state. He did, however, lay down certain requirements for consulting actuaries who act as examiners and who charge, naturally, a much higher price. That is one point of difference that has arisen from time to time, the allegation being made that these actuarial firms keep a salaried staff and then charge a very high price per diem, which gives the management a juicy rakeoff.

One Feature Remedied

One feature was adjusted that will be of special advantage to companies that have a scattering business in certain zones. Some commissioners complained that a zone participated in an examination where a company had a small business in its confines and it seemed unfair to put it to so great an expense. This has been cured by making it mandatory that in case of a convention examination all zones that produce an income of $1,000,000 a year for a company shall participate. Where the income is less than $1,000,000 there will be no participation. If a home commissioner, in asking for a convention examination, does not specify all the zones entitled to participate and attempts to limit the number, even though one may have over $1,000,000 in annual premiums, then the chairman of the examinations committee shall make the assignment.

In case a company operates in zones that do not have $1,000,000 in any, then the home commissioner asking for a convention examination has the privilege of requesting some state from any zone or from his own zone to participate and

Guests Present at Hoffman Duck Feast

DES MOINES—There was much interest in the duck dinner given by President A. H. Hoffman of the American Mutual Life of Des Moines during the convention of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners here. Mr. Hoffman shot all the ducks that were served at the dinner. He was chairman of the reception committee for the convention and was busy all the time in his activities. Insurance commissioners present were Robertson, Missouri; Daniel, Texas; Harrison, Arkansas; Bowles, Virginia; Ham, Wyoming; Sullivan, Washington; Palmer, Illinois; Gauss, Michigan; Read, Oklahoma; Earle, Oregon; Erickson, North Dakota; Yetka, Minnesota; Smrha, Nebraska; Dunn, South Dakota; Boney, North Carolina; Deputy F. P. Sizer of Missouri.

Governor N. G. Kraschel of Iowa was a distinguished guest. Col. C. B. Robbins, manager American Life Convention, was present as was Ray Murphy, former Iowa commissioner and now assistant general manager of the Association of Casualty & Surety Executives in New York City. John H. Evans, vice-president Ohio National Life, was a guest. Officials of the American Mutual Life sitting at the table were Secretary G. F. Wall; Actuary A. W. Larsen; Agency Vice-president J. J. Moriarty; Medical Director E. B. Mountain; Assistant General Counsel John G. Bowles. Vice-president B. Werkenhith of the American National of Galveston was a guest. Manager Gary Riggs of the Fort Des Moines Hotel was present. Clifford DePuy, publisher "Underwriters Review," and C. M. Cartwright of THE NATIONAL UNDERWRITER were also guests.

it is likely that such will be acknowledged.

President Julian of Alabama makes an admirable presiding officer, beaming all the time with his spirit of good cheer, harmony and graciousness. He is chuck full of southern stories, some of them of a rather Rabelaisian tincture, but with him reciting the anecdote the roughness is smoothed. He keeps the machinery going, is easy on his feet, has the suavity of the great south, and yet he can take a position and hold it.

Unfortunately, owing to the political exigencies, much of the work of the association is halted and even destroyed because a committee may have made considerable research and gotten a subject well developed when out go the commanding figures on the committee.

One of the criticisms that can be honestly made of the work done at these meetings is that it is necessarily hasty and haphazard. A committee meeting is called, there is probably a hearing and there are a number of points developed. The subject is a profound one. The meeting adjourns and there may be an attempt made to conduct correspondence regarding the subject among the members, which is very unsatisfactory. If anything is done or any conclusion reached, it has to be with haste. Therefore, there is not the opportunity for a thorough deliberation and study. Naturally, where a convention lasts but three days and there is much entertainment thrown in, sufficient time cannot be given to any one subject to make an exhaustive study. When the convention adjourns, the commissioners go to their own domiciles all over the country and it is too expensive to call hearings except at the annual and semi-annual meetings.

A number of commissioners attending the Des Moines meeting may be out of office before the June meeting. Some of these men are particularly useful, highly intelligent and are just reaching the zenith of their powers and knowledge of their work.

Gough of New Jersey is the war horse of the convention—the man who has more influence than anyone else, largely due to his long tenure of office, his knowledge of what has been done, his

Asking Prospect to Buy Is Compliment

Edgar Kobak Warns Against Use of "Not Here to Sell You"

NEW YORK.—Compliment the prospect by asking him to buy, advised Edgar Kobak, vice-president Lord & Thomas, advertising agency, in his address before the New York City Life Underwriters Association. He warned against the use of such subterfuges as professing a desire to make an audit or analysis without any wish to make a sale.

"Even if the prospect is not able to pay for what you recommend, he is complimented to know you think he can pay for it," Mr. Kobak pointed out.

The speaker also warned against anxiety or tension as this is always contagious and is bound to react on the prospect, causing him to hurry the interview, while if the salesman relaxes, the client relaxes. He also emphasized the importance of shoe leather, conceding that while such advice is admittedly old stuff, there is no substitute for it. He warned, however, that the salesman should not delude himself by spending time on friendly accounts or semi-social visits.

Value of Written Reports

Mr. Kobak stressed the value of written reports, saying that if these are not made to one's boss, they should be made to oneself. Such an analysis of the day's work will show up weak points and throw much valuable light on the art of handling people. Among the other qualifications for good salesmanship Mr. Kobak mentioned the following:

Be a good sport or a good loser when the prospect says "no." Don't show disappointment or chagrin but leave a pleasant impression against the next call. Be yourself and tell your story in your own way. Be neat in your dress—not flashy—just neat. Like people. This is not half as hard as the effort to dislike people and it is harder to sell people if you dislike them.

Ask yourself if you have an open mind in no way prejudiced by convictions. Don't fool yourself on this point.

Avoid "Leaning"

Salesmen are natural leaners. Know your business so well that you don't have to lean or feel lost without your brief-case, chart, graphs, illustrations, or what have you. Be able to work with your bare hands or the knowledge stored away in your cranium.

Be sincere, sympathetic and a good listener. Ask questions to make people talk. Never win an argument. Put your whole heart into your work. A half-hearted job is only half done and that so poorly that it is better undone.

Why fear? The worst the prospect can do is to say "no." Look back on earlier fears and apply the remedy that worked then. Stories often help to drive home a point if you know how to tell a story. If you don't, however, it is better to tell an actual experience than to make a poor attempt at repeating and gesticulating in the manner of the original story teller.

Mr. Kobak also stressed the important qualities of imagination, enthusiasm, and industry.

Col. Button Returns to Richmond

Col. Joseph Button, head of the Stock Company Association of Washington, D. C., who was stricken while attending the meeting of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners in Des Moines and was taken to the hospital in that city, has now returned to his home city of Richmond, Va., and is in Stuart Circle Hospital there.

Mrs. Button had been visiting a sister in Bronxville, N. Y. Mr. Barry had C. W. Hobbs of the National Council of Compensation Insurance, who had been to Des Moines but has returned east, see Mrs. Button. She went to Washington, got her car and drove to Richmond.

Col. Button is 73 years of age. For many years he was insurance commissioner of Virginia and served as secretary of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners.

The Ancient Day

The shadow of war and threatened war in other parts of the world seems almost to isolate the American people from many nations, because here, but not among them, is peace on earth, and we know that by all men, our peace will not be shared. Christmas activities are bringing the anticipatory glow of Christmas happiness, that will fill our homes and color business relationships,—happiness incomplete unless we share it with some of those who without it would spend the day of days in want and misery. Long ago General William Booth, the then head of the Salvation Army, wanted to cable a Christmas greeting to every Salvation post, but the cost staggered him. And so a single word went to the world-wide members of his Army. It was, "OTHERS"!

THE PENN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, of Philadelphia, wishes for every member of the life insurance fraternity a Christmas season whose joyous spirit shall be regnant in every heart and home, so willingly, so completely, that to none shall the ancient greeting sound an unaccepted note!

Three Prudential Officials Promoted

George H. Chace, R. M. Green and F. Bruce Gerhard Are Advanced

NEWARK, N. J.—Three executive elections are announced by the Prudential. George H. Chace, who has been second vice-president in charge of ordinary agencies, was elected vice-president and will also have under his direction the group insurance and advertising departments.

Second Vice-president Robert M. Green was elected vice-president and will have the direction and supervision of home office personnel work.

F. Bruce Gerhard Advanced

F. Bruce Gerhard, associate actuary, was named second vice-president and associate actuary. In addition to his present duties he will be associated with Vice-president Valentine Howell in the administration work of the actuarial department.

Vice-president Chace has been on the Prudential staff since 1905, starting as a clerk and serving through various positions, including manager, secretary to the president, an assistant secretary and second vice-president.

Vice-president Green went to the Prudential in 1932 and has successively been assistant secretary, assistant treasurer, treasurer and second vice-president.

Mr. Gerhard, who enrolled with the Prudential as an assistant actuary in 1929, was later promoted to an associate actuary.

FHA-Insured Loans Pass $2,000,000,000

The federal housing administration has insured more than $2,000,000,000 of loans to buy, refinance, or improve residential properties since the passage of the national housing act in June, 1934, according to Administrator Stewart McDonald. Mr. McDonald reported that the FHA now has a monthly income of about $1,000,000, which is almost equal to operating expenses. Of the $2,000,000,000 total, $1,235,000,000 represents the original amounts of some 300,000 mortgages on small homes. Mortgages on 127 large scale housing projects account for about $60,000,000.

The FHA has also insured, under temporary provisions of the national housing act about 1,775,000 property improvement loans which had an original face amount of $710,000,000.

Much of the mortgage investing of life companies since the passage of the national housing act has been in FHA insured mortgages both in the residential field and among large scale housing projects.

Boost Van Houten for Iowa Job

The Davenport Association of Life Underwriters appointed a committee to advance the candidacy of A. W. Van Houten for Iowa insurance commissioner. The committee consists of Paul Otto, Connecticut Mutual, chairman; Charles Sessions, New York Life, and Karl E. Madden, Penn Mutual. The committee has already interviewed the governor-elect.

Mr. Van Houten is special agent in the Paul Otto agency in Davenport. He has been in life insurance work since 1906. He is a past president of the Davenport Life Underwriters Association and was the first president of the Iowa Life Underwriters Association.

Harry H. Wise, agent of the Massachusetts Mutual at Lorain, O., died after a severe heart attack at the age of 64. He went with the company May 1, 1914, and has been a steady producer during his 24 years experience.

Uncertainty As to Effect of Taxing

Which of these methods is adopted would have a considerable effect on the municipal bond holdings of life companies along with all other holders of such bonds. If it is done by passing a law and the law is held constitutional, the values of existing bond issues will be depressed because of the possibility of further action by congress to tax existing issues. This would have little effect for life companies, as they customarily hold their securities to maturity and are not much concerned about current market quotations, as long as the issuer of the bonds is meeting its obligations and will be able to pay them off at maturity.

If, on the other hand, the constitutional amendment method were used, thereby eliminating the possibility that existing issues could be taxed, municipal securities probably would have a scarcity value even in excess of what they now have. While municipal securities have some income tax advantage to an insurance company, the advantage is slight compared with the value of this feature to wealthy individuals in the higher income tax brackets. The knowledge that no more tax exempt securities would be available after the present supply had been exhausted would probably result in a decidedly higher market value for existing issues, and consequently an opportunity for life companies and other institutional holders to sell at a worthwhile profit.

While wealthy individuals find it worthwhile to pay a stiff price for municipal securities in order to get the tax exemption, dealers say that an equal if not greater incentive to these buyers is the fact that it helps the rich conceal the full amount of their incomes. The income tax laws do not require taxpayers to reveal the amount of tax exempt income. Frequently this feature is considerably more prized than the saving in income taxes.

Administration Attitude

The Roosevelt administration appears quite determined to try the legislative, rather than the constitutional amendment method, of removing the tax exempt provision. It is believed that the government will run into more resistance than was first anticipated, because of the dangers and uncertainties involved in the use of the legislative method. It is also quite widely believed that the Supreme Court would declare the legislative method unconstitutional.

In spite of the increase in yield of one-half to three-quarters of 1 percent that some of the institutional bond buyers believed municipals would have to yield without the tax exempt feature, other estimates, mainly by investment bankers, run considerably higher, anywhere from 1½ to 2 percent.

N. Y. Supervisors Hosts to Managers

Annual Dinner Preceded by Panel Discussion on Problems of Recruiting

NEW YORK—The New York City Life Supervisors Association was host at its annual dinner to general agents and managers whose offices are represented in its membership. L. M. Baker, Mutual Benefit, association president, was toastmaster.

An innovation was a panel discussion in the afternoon, chairman of which was W. C. Smerling, associate general agent, Berkshire Life. It was devoted to recruiting. Mr. Smerling pointed out that the process of recruiting is one of the subdivisions of the problem of manpower in an agency and one which deserves the definite attention of the supervisor, whether his work is confined to full-time supervision, part-time supervision, or brokerage work.

"When our association was originally organized, its purpose was primarily to develop a feeling of good fellowship among a number of supervisors whose personalities, ideas, and philosophies blended, to discuss their trials and tribulations, their successes and disappointments, and to encourage among themselves the desire for reciprocity in business," Mr. Smerling said.

Must Aid Members

"Due to changing trends in our business, all of us have come to the realization that if our organization is to benefit its members, then it is incumbent upon us to foster ideas that will aid in the future success of our members.

"It is evident that as time goes on that in aiding new manpower to our forces, the new recruits will be of a different type from many now representing the institution of life insurance. One of the reasons why it has been difficult to obtain the right type,—underwriters who we feel will serve the insuring public better—is in a large measure due to the fact that this process requires a great deal of time, effort and money.

"With these thoughts in mind, we present to you today, ideas which we hope will help to impress upon your minds, the fact that the life insurance institution is looking to us to secure that type of men—men who can be brought into the business and can be placed on a successful earning basis.

Actual Experience Stressed

"The men, who today, will present their ideas, plans and methods to you, are members of our organization—men who have had personal experience with the subject at hand, men who have encountered the obstacles and have in some measure, at least, been able to overcome them. We are frank enough to admit that we are still looking for a solution or the panacea to this problem of recruiting. We recognize that our experiences and our methods are still in the experimental stage."

The discussion was divided into two sections, one representing the larger agencies and the other the smaller offices. Lester Einstein and Ben Salinger of the Mutual Benefit, Carl Smith of the Connecticut Mutual and Eric Wilson of the Penn Mutual, represented the large agencies, that is, those having two or more supervisors. The smaller agencies were represented by Lewis Neikrug of the Continental American, Paul Orr of the Guardian Life of New York and Mr. Smerling.

To Hear Arkansas Tax Suit

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—Suit of Arkansas against the New York Life for tax alleged due on annuity contracts written in the state between 1925 and 1937, inclusive, is scheduled to be heard this week in Pulaski chancery court. Outcome is expected to serve as guide for disposition of similar suits against 13 other companies, and to set the state's policy in regard to future collections on such contracts. The company denied the 2 percent tax on gross premium receipts was applicable to annuities. The tax was 2 percent before 1930, and has been 2½ percent since then.

Procedure Planned for Examinations of the Companies

Commissioner J. G. Read of Oklahoma, who is chairman of the examinations committee of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, was asked what would be the procedure where a company had less than $1,000,000 in the zones in which it operates. Under the new regulations if a zone does not have $1,000,000 or over for a company under examination it will not be invited to participate. Mr. Read answers the inquiry as follows:

"Our by-laws provide for convention examination of all companies operating in three or more states. A convention examination may be conducted by two or more states. The latter would apply where companies operate in three or more states and have a small volume. In other words—suppose a company had a small volume in each of six zones. It would be proper and right for the commissioner of the domiciliary state to ask only one state of some other zone. However, should a company operate in a number of zones and have $1,000,000 or more premium income in one or more zones which were not invited to participate in the examination by the home state commissioner then it is, in the future, mandatory upon the chairman of the examination committee to include such zone or zones as have $1,000,000 or more premium income."

SMRHA'S RECOMMENDATION

LINCOLN, NEB.—Director Smrha returns from attendance at the Des Moines convention of state insurance commissioners highly pleased with the progress made in his proposal for amendment of the bylaws relating to examinations at the annual meeting. Mr. Smrha proposes that previous to an examination a chief examiner be named whose duty will be to lay out the work along formulated lines so designed as to reduce the amount of time consumed and also the cost of examinations. Procedure is definitely fixed so that exact results are obtained. Mr. Smrha would also like to have action taken favoring permanent tenure in office of examiners. In Nebraska it was formerly the practice, as in other states, of including these positions in the political patronage pot, but for the last 10 years the merit system, although not officially established, has been followed with excellent results.

Law Journal Changes Hands

Commerce Clearing House, the legal reporting organization, has purchased the Insurance Law Journal from L. A. Mack, president of the "Weekly Underwriter" of New York. Commerce Clearing House will coordinate the publication with its insurance law reporting service. Under Mr. Mack's ownership, it has been edited by Fred S. Knight, who is also editor of the legal department of the "Weekly Underwriter." Mr. Mack purchased the journal from Thomas A. Hine in 1923.

Twenty-five Year Celebration

The Fidelity Mutual's 25-Year Club Dec. 7 celebrated the 60th anniversary of the founding of the company in connection with its 10th annual dinner, given by President Walter LeMar Talbot at the head office. Forty members were in attendance. Four new members were added to the roll of those who have been continuously in the employ of the company for 25 years.

W. J. Greenwood, 73, for many years representative of the Mutual Benefit Life in Indianapolis, died after a short illness. In his early youth he taught school and entered the life insurance business in 1901.

Review of Texas Investment Restrictions Is Asked

DALLAS—The field of permissible investments of life insurance companies must receive serious consideration, Chairman Daniel of the Texas board of insurance commissioners warned the governor in his annual report as he called attention to the large amount of cash on hand by practically all of the Texas companies. Mr. Daniel says that insurance companies are unable to find desirable and permissible securities at a net yield of 3 to 3½ percent, and in many cases are accepting a lower rate rather than no return.

"Such action should be taken cautiously and any legislation along this line should be safeguarded" says the annual report "and the way should not be opened for speculative or unsafe investments or encouraging companies to make loans that are not based upon absolutely sound values. This problem challenges the best thought and ability of insurance executives.

"The insurance business has outgrown the present law and a new modern code is desirable. A general strengthening of our insurance laws for the purpose of giving to the public the maximum of protection to which our citizens are entitled and which they have a right to expect is urgent. This would be beneficial to legitimate business and a protection to all policyholders," the report continued.

Judge Daniel's term expires in January and he is a candidate for reappointment in competition with a large field of aspirants. The appointment will be made by Governor-Elect O'Daniel.

Would Merge Iowa Department

DES MOINES—Reorganization of the Iowa department is again being mentioned as the Republicans prepare to take over the political offices after the first of the year.

One of the economy plans being discussed by the Republicans is merging the insurance, banking and securities departments into one bureau. The insurance and banking departments now are under the control of the governor and the securities by the secretary of state.

Insurance executives have indicated they will protest any consolidations affecting the insurance department.

Buying Power Increased

MINNEAPOLIS — Family buying power in the United States is now running $75,000,000 a month higher than last summer. The gain is due to a drop in living costs and a sharp autumn expansion in payrolls, according to a quarterly study of price and wage relationships by Northwestern National Life.

Connecticut General Enters Texas

A. C. Prendergast & Co. of Dallas Named as Representative in State

The Connecticut General Life has entered Texas and appointed as its representative in Dallas the prominent general insurance firm of A. C. Prendergast & Co. A. C. Prendergast, head of the firm, is in charge of business development in the new life department.

The Connecticut General has been making mortgage loans in Texas for more than 15 years. About 15 percent of its mortgage loan assets are invested in Texas properties. It has farm loan offices in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston.

Wolf, manager of Cleveland West, was appointed manager of the Norwood district to fill the vacancy created by appointment of C. F. Brawley, former manager there, to superintendent of agencies of division E.

Veteran Detroit Manager of Sun Soon to Retire

DETROIT—Ernest W. Owen, manager Detroit branch Sun Life of Canada, well known speaker, will retire from active field work in accordance with his contract with the Sun, which calls for retirement on his 60th birthday, Jan. 19. He plans to devote much time to lecturing on life insurance and salesmanship.

For many years he has been much in demand as an inspirational speaker before managers' and underwriters' organizations and sales conventions of his own and other companies. One of his principal talks, "The Thirteen Keys to Success," is widely known.

Long active in association work, he is chairman international council National Association of Life Underwriters, served two terms as secretary and several terms as trustee. He is past president Associated Life General Agents & Managers of Detroit and also of the life underwriters association here.

He was born in Wales, lost his father at 12 and mother at 15. A wealthy uncle offered to finance his education, but he preferred to stand on his own feet and took passage to Halifax. His first American impression was a volume on Lincoln, "From Log Cabin to White House" and he has been a student and lecturer on Lincoln for many years.

He worked on a farm, receiving $12 in his first year in Canada, then in a lumber mill. He secured his education in Montreal, and in 1907 entered the Sun's agency department, soon transferring to the Montreal city agency. In 1909 he was sent to Alberta as provincial manager. In 1913 he was appointed Detroit branch manager. In 1912 the branch produced $400,000; within a few years the new business ran over a million a month. Since 1920 the agency has averaged close to $10,000,000 a year with a peak of $18,000,000.

Paul Huttering will attend from the home office, and C. B. Stumes of Stumes & Loeb, Chicago, general agents Penn Mutual, president Chicago Association of Life Underwriters, will be a guest speaker.

Some Observations on Commissioners

supervision over an important state, his conservative viewpoint and his experience in dealing with subjects that have come up from time to time. He is not subject to politics and thus has a continuity of experience. There are some men, like Bakes of Idaho, who, whenever they get on their feet, express themselves with lucidity, decisiveness and conviction. He is a man of culture and soon will be out of office. Another young man who is not heard to any great extent, Hammond of Delaware, but who is reliable, also on Jan. 1 retires to private life.

Goodcell Left Fine Impression

Goodcell of California, a lawyer of Los Angeles, who has been closely identified with Republican politics in his section, made a very excellent impression at his first meeting. He is an orator in the upper brackets. He did not hesitate to express himself and he did so always with considerable power and emphasis. He has the fervor and manner of a trial lawyer and the platform politician. Since he has been in office he has taken counsel with his predecessor, S. L. Carpenter, and leaders in the business and has made but few mistakes.

Harrington of Massachusetts is a man who is rapidly coming to the front in influence and knowledge of his official duties. He was an important agent in Boston and therefore had a working knowledge of the fire and casualty business from the selling standpoint. He does not believe in the state entering into the field of private activity and he wants the business itself to solve its problems if possible. He believes thoroughly in giving a hearing to those who are interested in a project. He is not impulsive and he has excellent good sense.

Another agent-commissioner who has left a good impression is Rouillard of New Hampshire, who was formerly president of the New Hampshire Association of Insurance Agents. Not as aggressive or not presenting his views to such an extent as Harrington, yet he has his feet on the ground and is taking his job seriously. There is another agent-commissioner in New England, C. Waldo Lovejoy of Maine, who was formerly secretary of the Maine Association of Insurance Agents. He, too, knows his way around, is never explosive, but is constantly increasing his stature as a public official. These three men fortunately will continue in office.

One of the old fashioned commissioners, Daniel of Texas, who is the life insurance commissioner and chairman of the board, does not hesitate to voice his opinion and he does so in a vehement style. He is regarded as not exactly streamlined. He is not in accord with many of the gadgets, tassels and adornments that have entered the supervisory field.

Palmer of Illinois, one of the brilliant commissioners, had very little to say at Des Moines. He has been, however, active in his own department and other commissioners have great respect for what he says and the conclusions he has reached. They were especially interested in the work he has done along automobile finance lines. Seemingly at Des Moines he lent a listening ear and, therefore, did not have much to say. Frequently he works behind the scenes and he is always in step with the progressive commissioners of the stalwart type. That is, he has great understanding and liking for such men as Pink, Harrington and Blackall.

Neslen of Utah

Neslen of Utah is a well dressed, all-round man who has taken an active part in the affairs of his city and in the Mormon church. He impresses everyone as being a gentleman of the finest brand. Utah has given a good account of itself in recent years. There was no better commissioner than E. A. Smith, now connected with the agency department of the Pacific Mutual Life at its head office. He was never riding the wind nor was he in sympathy with a lot of radical steps that were taken. Mr. Neslen belongs to the same school. He is not much interested in extremists.

Earle of Oregon is a bellwether for the Western Conference of Insurance Commissioners, a man of positive convictions but thoroughly honest. He is regarded sometimes as too impulsive, but he has a certain course that he wants to follow and he walks in that direction.

There are commissioners that do not try to take the platform and are perhaps rather timid about expressing themselves, and yet in the lobby and in the hotel rooms they quietly work. Such commissioners as Harrison of Arkansas, Moor of the District of Columbia, Hanna of Maryland, Gauss of Michigan, Williams of Mississippi, Sullivan of Washington and others are politicians of the organization.

Bowen Showed Fight

Bowen of Ohio, who has given a lot of thought to real estate appraisals and standard courses along this line, showed fight when Daniel of Texas attempted to emasculate his report and end the committee's existence by claiming that the whole effort was made to provide work for members of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers. Bowen is usually mild spoken. At this time he got a bit ruffled and carried the day. The Ohio superintendent very fortunately has a strong right arm in Actuary W. A. Robinson, one of the oldest men in point of tenure of office in the country, who is chairman of the blanks committee, a man of highest integrity, whose advice is sound.

Seemingly the host commissioner, Pew of Iowa, may not be in office very long. He is a Democrat and the new governor is a Republican. He and the committees of insurance officials and agents who handled the convention did a magnificent piece of work. Everything was of the highest type. There could have been no greater show of quality than was presented following the banquet. The numbers were of an exceedingly high order. Des Moines and Iowa put themselves on the map insurance-wise as they never had before. Special praise should be accorded to President Henry S. Nollen of the Equitable Life of Iowa, who was the general chairman of arrangements, and A. H. Hoffman, president American Mutual Life, who headed the reception committee.

John C. Stevenson of the Eldon D. Willson agency of the Mutual Life of New York at Richmond, Va., led the Virginia agency and ranked 10th in paid for business in the country. He has already completed his qualification to attend the Quarter of a Million Club convention next May.

Fidelity Investment Scheme Under Attack by SEC

Life insurance men will be intensely interested in the Fidelity Investment Association case. At the instance of SEC Federal Judge Moinet in Detroit has ordered Fidelity to show cause next Monday morning why it should not be enjoined from using the mails for engaging in interstate commerce. Apparently SEC is preparing to prove that Fidelity engaged in a number of practices that might be described as "window dressing."

Fidelity has employed a host of persistent salesmen and they have offered keen competition to regular life insurance propositions. Fidelity collects $15 a month from the contract holders for 10 years, and then agrees to pay out $20 a month for 10 years.

Lincoln National Life has a deal to pay the unpaid instalments of those contract holders who die before the end of the 10 year paying in period.

Fidelity is under the jurisdiction of the West Virginia insurance department.

Charles G. Bloomingdale, Marion, O., agent Ohio State Life, has completed three years of consecutive weekly production.

Another Year of Progress...

Nineteen Thirty-Eight will mark another year of outstanding progress in the history of the Pilot Life.

In June and October, the largest volume of business ever written in those months was recorded; while, through November, substantial gains of insurance in force have been registered in eight of the last nine months.

To a progressive and enlarged field personnel who have made possible these 1938 records—sincere appreciation is publicly expressed.

urged. He pointed out that this is a problem common to all lines of insurance and one in which equal interest should be taken by all. A lively discussion followed Mr. Griswold's talk in which John Ashmead, Phoenix of Hartford, E. M. Hunt, Mutual Life of New York and Mr. Gibson participated.

Quoted from Letters

M. S. Rukeyser, economic commentator, New York "Journal-American" and International News Service, confined his talk principally to life insurance. There is a lack of public mindedness in life insurance executives, he stated and through misconception there has grown up an accumulation of negative thought toward the life insurance business. "Resell the glamour of life insurance," he urged his audience. Insurance agents carry the torch of early Americanism for what they sell gives self reliance and independence. The fact that 70 percent of the life insurance in force today is carried in this country, illustrates the desire of the people for security for themselves and family.

Mr. Rukeyser quoted from several letters received from readers questioning him about life insurance. There is a certain trend of thought today, he said, that doubts the wisdom or use of private thrift. The life insurance business is inherently sound and useful and the public should be informed frankly and candidly regarding the operations of the companies. If the public is fully informed they will become its friends instead of its skeptics. "Redesign and repackage your produce," he counseled. Make your contract short, simple and understandable.

Dr. George H. Gallup, vice president, Young & Rubincam, and originator of the "Gallup Surveys," spoke on "What the Public Thinks." He described the work he and his associates have done in making surveys and taking polls on economic, political and social questions. The results show, he stated, that the mass of people are capable of governing themselves rather than be governed. This meeting differed from former ones in that there were no group sessions. President Dreher announced that the spring meeting of the I. A. C. would be held at the Hotel Pennsylvania here, May 16.

Ann Arbor "Millionaire" Is Changing Location

Caleb R. Smith, former chairman of the Million Dollar Round Table and a life member of that distinguished group, is retiring as district agent in Ann Arbor, Mich., for Massachusetts Mutual Life and will become associated with the Greensboro, N. Dr. John D. Finlayson, who has been located in Tulsa, with Massachusetts Mutual, is taking charge of the Ann Arbor office. He has been with the company since 1935. At one time he was president of Fairmount College and he was chancellor of the University of Tulsa. He graduated from the University of Michigan in 1911. Last year Dr. Finlayson was 17th among Massachusetts Mutual agents.

Mr. Smith has had a remarkable record in production and he has had the ability to make others understand what his methods have been and become stimulated by their recital. From 1924 until about a year ago he maintained a million dollar a year schedule. He has been given special recognition at the Massachusetts Mutual conventions each year because of his record for making 100 percent delivery of applied business.

NEWS ABOUT LIFE POLICIES

By JOHN H. RADER

New Policies, Premium Rates, Dividends, Surrender Values, and all Changes in Policy Literature, Rate Books, etc. Supplementing the "Unique Manual Digest" and "Little Gem." Published Annually in May and March respectively. PRICE, $5.00 and $2.50 respectively.

Hancock's New Juvenile Series

The John Hancock, Jan. 1, will introduce new juvenile monthly debit ordinary policies, to be issued from attained age one month to nine nearest birthday. The company also will revise its industrial forms: Life policies with premium ceasing at age 75—to be issued at ages 1-9 next birthday inclusive on the infantile form and ages 10-65 next birthday inclusive on the adult forms; second, the $250 adult 20-payment life policy will be continued as at present, but to be issued at ages 10-55 next birthday inclusive.

In addition a new industrial policy will be issued on the 20-payment life plan with a weekly premium unit of 5 cents, to be issued at ages 1-50 next birthday inclusive.

New industrial policies will contain a provision for refund at the end of the year in event premiums are paid for a period of one year without default direct to a company office. This will amount to 10 percent and will apply to all industrial policies, new and existing.

Expect Equitable Society to Continue Dividend Scale

Equitable Society's dividend scale on ordinary policies and annuities is expected to be continued in 1939. The directors in February will consider the management's proposal to this effect, and approval it is assumed will be given.

A substantially reduced scale on single premium immediate annuities, however, is expected to be put in effect. Rates for this form were revised in July in line with experience. Continuation of the excess interest rate paid on dividends on deposit and 3 percent participating settlement options is anticipated. A factor of 0.4 percent will be added for instalment and life income settlements and certificate of deposit payable annually, and 0.25 percent on dividend deposits and certificates of deposit payable other than annually.

Policy Changes Announced

The policies of the companion companies, the Massachusetts Protective and Paul Revere, are being changed to provide for 5 percent interest on policy loans and extended insurance is being made the automatic non-forfeiture feature in place of paid-up insurance in those states which do not require the automatic paid-up feature. The unusual feature of this change is that the 5 percent policy loan interest rate will be applicable to all policies now outstanding even though there is at present a loan on the policy. In accordance with present practice, the company will bill the interest in advance but the advance rate will be 4.78 percent which is the equivalent of 5 percent if paid at the end of the year. If a policyholder has a $100 loan he may pay $4.76 at the beginning of the year or failing this, the company will add $5 to his loan at the end of the year making his total indebtedness $105.

Mutual Benefit Dividend Scale

The Mutual Benefit Life has announced that it is continuing during 1939 the dividend scale used in 1938. It is also continuing for 1939 the dividend accumulation rate of 3.5 percent and the settlement option rate of 3.75 percent for both non-withdrawable and withdrawable funds.

Guardian of N. Y. Has New '39 Scale

NEW YORK—The Guardian Life of New York has allotted $1,938,000 for 1939 dividends. Dividends for 1938 were $2,215,000. The decrease is due to use of a 3½ percent interest factor rather than the present one of 3¼ percent, and substitution of an expense charge which decreases with policy duration in place of the present flat charge. The new scale is equivalent to a reduction of approximately 15 percent.

The present rate of interest on proceeds held at interest will be continued: 3½ percent where there is no right of withdrawal; 3 percent where this right exists except in the case of a few old policies where the guaranteed rate is 3½ percent. The rate on dividend accumulations will be continued at 3½ percent.

The Guardian, unlike a number of other companies is not revising its policy contracts as of Jan. 1. It reduced its policy loan interest rates by endorsement to 5 percent Nov. 1. It will bring out a new contract Mar. 1. Details will be announced at the field convention at Hollywood, Fla., Jan. 10-13. It is understood that the new contract will be quite different from the typical changes that many companies have announced.

Connecticut Mutual Alters Surrender Charge Schedules

In addition to the loan interest and settlement option changes such as are being made by numerous companies at present, Connecticut Mutual is changing certain other features of its contract as of Jan. 1. The most important change involves the surrender charge and produces a new schedule of non-forfeiture values for the first 10 policy years.

The old surrender charge was $12 per $1,000, the second to the fourth years inclusive, decreasing $2 per year thereafter so that the full reserve was payable upon surrender in the tenth and later years. The new schedule starts out at a $16 surrender charge the second year, decreasing $2 per year until it reaches $10 at the end of the fifth year; thereafter reducing $1 per year until it reaches $6 at the end of the ninth year. There is no surrender charge at the end of the tenth and later years.

The name of the double indemnity clause has been changed to additional indemnity agreement and the coverage has been extended to fare-paying passengers in a licensed passenger aircraft, piloted by a licensed passenger pilot, on a scheduled passenger air service regularly offered by an incorporated carrier between specified established airports.

There is no change in the family income or family maintenance agreements since the guaranteed rate of interest remains 3 percent on such agreements.

Guaranteed rate of interest on dividend accumulations remains at 3 percent.

New Options Are Introduced by National of Vermont

National Life of Vermont is making loan interest and settlement option changes similar to other companies and the new contracts will contain as policy provisions certain privileges which have been tested as company practices during the past few years.

The right to have the cash surrender value applied under any of the settlement options after the fifth policy year will be incorporated. Two additional modes of settlement are added to the policy, option 4 providing for proceeds to be paid in stipulated monthly amounts until principal and interest are exhausted, and option 5 which grants the right to convert the proceeds of the policy into a life annuity at attained age based on the current rates less a discount of about $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent. Another settlement option will be made available although it will not be included in the policy unless the insured makes a specific request. This provides for a joint income with 10 years certain and life thereafter. Retirement contracts and the family maintenance plans will have new premiums because of the revised settlement option basis.

New England Mutual Adjusts Scale

The New England Mutual has voted \$9,550,000 for distribution as dividends to policyholders during the full year 1938. The dividends have been calculated by a new scale in which the interest factor is reduced to $3\frac{3}{4}$ percent, which is more consistent with the current rate of return on investments. The factor for savings in expense has been reapportioned, and while the individual dividends to be paid under the new scale will usually be less than the dividends paid in 1938, at certain ages and years of duration larger dividends will be paid. The aggregate decrease compared to the dividend distribution for 1938 is less than 6 percent. Interest at the rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent will be credited on settlement options and on dividends left to accumulate.

Beneficial Life Changes

The Beneficial Life of Salt Lake has announced that the 1938 dividend schedule will be continued for 1939. Policies dated after Jan. 1, will provide for 5 percent on policy loans and interest guaranteed on all funds left with the company will be reduced from $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 percent.

Capitol Life Settlement Options

The Capitol Life of Denver has set Feb. 1 as the effective date for new settlement options. At that time a new rate book is expected but the extent of changes which it will include has not been announced.

Massachusetts Mutual Expands Direct Mail

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. — Further extending its already expansive direct mail advertising program, Massachusetts Mutual Life will announce soon four new folders, capitalizing on the value of eye appeal. Wash drawings in photographic style and two-color printing are used.

With high rank among companies showing a large percentage of insurance arranged under settlement options, Massachusetts Mutual has planned to assist further its agents in program selling, one of the new advertising pieces being devoted to this subject. Other new folders focus attention on corporation stock retirement, partnership, and key-man protection, respectively.

Seneca Gamble, agency assistant, observes that advertising pieces to be successful must be sanctioned by the agents.

It will only gather dust if the agents do not like it. The plan of procedure must appeal to the agents, offering simplicity, economy of time in preparing lists, and speed in placing the advertising in the hands of prospects. The home office must depend largely upon its general agents to promote use of the service by agents, he said.

Illinois Banker Gets Iowa Writ

DES MOINES. — Illinois Bankers Life has obtained temporary writs restraining Commissioner Pew of Iowa from holding a hearing on its affairs and

Attorney-general Mitchell from taking any action. The hearing was to have been for the purpose of reviewing certain phases of the transfer of old assessment contracts to the legal reserve basis.

John E. Dearden Is Candidate

One of the several candidates for appointment as insurance commissioner of Pennsylvania is John E. Dearden, who is vice-president and co-publisher of the "United States Review" of Pennsylvania. He is the son of the late Robert R. Dearden, Jr., who died just recently. He is 39 years of age.

A Bulwark of Defense

As a method of building up a secure, non-fluctuating estate—a bulwark of defense against the unknowable future—the importance of life insurance can hardly be overestimated. And its ultimate aim—adequate financial security for a family—is so vital that it must surely be considered a necessity by all clear-thinking people.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Excellent Public Relations Committee

WHEN one studies the personnel of the important committee that the ASSOCIATION OF LIFE INSURANCE PRESIDENTS has appointed to explore the field of public relations and attempt to devise plans to bring about a clearer and better public understanding of life insurance he is impressed with the wisdom that was shown in making the appointment. There is no more far reaching work before life insurance than what this committee will undertake to do. There has not been a definite course pursued heretofore and many mistakes have been made. Each company and each man has attempted to do something to promote a good feeling and a clearer conception of what life insurance is and what it is doing, but it has had no guidance.

The men who constitute the committee are particularly fitted to devise a program. The committee is headed by FRAZAR B. WILDE, president of the CONNECTICUT GENERAL LIFE, a man of high character, who certainly has a comprehensive knowledge of life insurance and who can look at the business from the public point of view. His associates are all men of eminence, those who have had experience in public affairs, have had to deal with people, who have a liking for folks and who want to see them understand life insurance as it is. They are ARTHUR F. HALL, president LINCOLN NATIONAL LIFE; W. HOWARD COX, president UNION CENTRAL LIFE; W. W. HEAD, GENERAL AMERICAN LIFE; R. D. MURPHY, vice-president and actuary EQUITABLE SOCIETY; JULIAN PRICE, president JEFFERSON STANDARD LIFE, and, C. G. TAYLOR, JR., second vice-president METROPOLITAN LIFE.

We defy anyone to improve on the personnel of this committee which is to undertake so vital work.

Let No Stars Fall on Alabama

WE REGRET to see the movement started by Governor-Elect DIXON of Alabama to place the insurance department in a bureau consisting of banking, labor and unemployment compensation. There is no more important state bureau than that which administers insurance. Its revenue exceeds all other departments except that which has to do with licensing motor vehicles. It is a department that demands as its head a man of exceptional ability, probity and fine conception of his duties. Wherever the insurance department is mixed up with something else or subordinated there is a lessened responsibility, there is much confusion in the minds of insurance people and the public and the insurance end of the bargain is greatly weakened.

Alabama has a splendid insurance department. It should remain as it is without being coordinated with other important departments. Wherever this experiment has been tried in important states it has been found a failure. We realize in states where official activities are not so exacting or much less popular it is necessary to consolidate activities. Alabama deserves to have an insurance department, standing alone and supervised by a commissioner on whom full responsibility will be placed.

Examinations—a Controversial Topic

A VERY puzzling and difficult topic for the insurance commissioners to discuss relates to examinations. Any commissioner has the right to examine a company operating in his state. That is a power given to him and when a company is licensed it immediately comes under the jurisdiction of the commissioner. In days gone by many examinations were made frequently for revenue only. The NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF INSURANCE COMMISSIONERS through the convention system has almost eliminated that injustice inflicted on companies. Examinations are now conducted in an orderly way and raids are frowned upon. There has been much progress made in this direction.

Even at the best examinations are expensive. As GEORGE S. VAN SCHAICK, vice-president NEW YORK LIFE and former New York insurance superintendent, pointed out in his remarkable address before the commissioners at their Des Moines convention, the home commissioner primarily should be responsible for the companies domiciled in his state. That would be the ideal way to conduct the supervisory part of the business. There is a grave responsibility resting on commissioners of states where companies of other jurisdictions are operating. A few states are equipped with an examining force that is competent. Others have an actuary and probably an examiner who could intelligently examine a company but none others. However, in most cases accountants are appointed as examiners who have not much experience. The examining of an insurance company is entirely different from auditing books. It requires special insight, capacity and ability.

The present zone system in connection with the convention plan was inaugurated by Deputy GOUGH of New Jersey. There has been some complaint about it. It is being refined and while the expense is greater under the revised form there is greater satisfaction expressed on part of a large number of commissioners because various sections of the country now participate in examinations. Looking at the subject from a cold blooded business standpoint, it is very doubtful whether the cost of these examinations can be justified. However, if there were no examinations we would have running wild companies of ill repute. Any insurance commissioner will tell us that 85 percent of the companies need no supervision whatever. They would go along reputably and honestly managed whether they were examined or not. It is the 15 percent that need constant surveillance.

As Mr. VAN SCHAICK pointed out, no company objects to an intelligent, competent, fact-finding examination. If suggestions can be made by experts to the management, the work is certainly constructive.

Taking the question by and large, we would say that in spite of some unsatisfactory phases of the present system it is far more orderly than in years gone by. Perhaps as greater experience is gotten, there can still be made some improvement.

NEWS OF THE COMPANIES

Great Lakes Life of Ohio Now Becomes Operative

CLEVELAND — Following approval of the Ohio department, Pure Protection Life Association of Cleveland has been changed to a mutual legal reserve company under the name of Great Lakes Life. The new company became operative Dec. 12, following a meeting of directors Dec. 8 when final details were considered. At that time R. M. Sandrock was added to the official staff as assistant treasurer. All other officers and directors of the old company were retained. At the same meeting, a 10 percent increase in the dividend scale was approved to become effective Jan. 1.

The Pure Protection Life was organized under the assessment laws of Ohio and began business in 1913.

The laws under which the association was incorporated provided for the issuance of assessment insurance, but the association in its policies pledged itself to maintain full legal reserve. Although the first few policies issued did contain a clause permitting the scaling of claims in the event that premiums were not sufficient, its policies have not been of the true assessment type.

Since 1930 the reserves have been based on 3½ percent, except the select whole life policy which is on a 3 percent basis.

On Oct. 17, a letter was sent to members proposing that the articles and by-laws be amended to qualify under the old line legal reserve statutes.

On Nov. 17, the policyholders at a special meeting, approved the plan. It was approved by the superintendent of insurance. Pure Protection Life was the last of the mutual protective associations in Ohio.

Present policyholders will have the option either to continue their contracts without change, or to convert into one of the new forms of contracts to be issued. The decision must be made within six months.

The company expects to bring out a new series of juvenile and adult policies immediately.

Officers of Great Lakes Life are: Cyril J. Bath, president and treasurer; E. J. Hull, vice-president; Frank T. Humiston, Jr., secretary; Robert M. Sandrock, assistant treasurer; Harold A. Reise of Chicago, consulting actuary; McKeehan, Merrick, Arter & Stewart, legal counsel; and Dr. S. A. Cleaveland, medical director.

Mr. Bath was born in London, England, in 1889 and came to this country in 1906. He settled in Cleveland and founded Cyril J. Bath & Co., machinery merchants, of which he is president today. This business led to the formation of the Steelweld Machinery Company of which he is also president. He became affiliated with Pure Protection Life as a trustee and executive vice-president in 1933. He was elected president and treasurer in 1936.

As of Aug. 31, 1938, Pure Protection reported assets $1,031,628; policy reserves, contingency reserve $10,000, net surplus $52,909.

Great West Life Is Examined

Assets of Great-West Life of Winnipeg as of Dec. 31, 1937 amounted to $156,686,688, according to a report of a convention examination conducted by Michigan assisted by North Dakota and Washington. Total income for 1937 was $27,015,770 and disbursements $20,077,178. Policy reserves were $123,934,500, paid up capital $1,000,000 and net surplus $2,248,884. Contingency reserve was $2,577,216.

Recommendation was made that 2 percent be written off book value annually of the home office property exclusive of land value. The company's valuations on real estate owned were called "very conservative." Reference was made to the difficulty encountered by Great-West Life on account of the moratorium laws in the western provinces. These laws make the institution of foreclosure procedure difficult.

Aetna Life Companies Pay Extra

Extra dividends together with the regular quarterly, have been declared by Aetna Life, Aetna Casualty and Automobile of Hartford. The extra of Aetna Life is 15 cents and its regular quarterly, 30 cents, both payable Jan. 2, to stock of record Dec. 10; the Aetna Casualty special is $1, and its regular quarterly 75 cents, both payable Jan. 2 to stock recorded Dec. 10, while the extra of Automobile is 40 cents and its quarterly 25 cents.

Grogan's Company Now Licensed

Provident American Life, which has been in process of formation for some time at the hands of George L. Grogan, has now been chartered and licensed in Texas. Mr. Grogan was formerly agency director of the old Bank Savings Life of Topeka and then vice-president and agency director of Federal Reserve Life. A typical experience record which illustrates how the "Golden Rule Contract" boosts an agent's earnings in a given territory.

A NEW OUTLOOK

In his home territory—a county of 40,000—this man saw a new opportunity for greater income. Last year he earned future renewals on $325,000 of business produced by men he appointed under a contract like his own and received a cash bonus of $775 on their efforts. This was in addition to first year commissions and fifteen vested renewals on his own substantial personal production. And it was all because he saw the possibilities the "Golden Rule Contract" affords all agents.

INDUSTRIAL FIELD NEWS

Prudential Jan. 1 Changes Announced

Prudential announces that beginning with policies dated on or after Jan. 1, weekly premium industrial policies will not be issued on the 20 year endowment, convertible endowment, endowment age 65 and infantile whole life for $1,000 (ultimate benefit) plans.

Policies on the whole life (paid-up at age 70), 20-year payment life, and 10-year payment life (ages 61 to 70) plans will be continued. Adult $500 policies on both the whole life (paid-up at age 70) and 20-year payment life plans will be continued, but on account of the new infantile limits of amount of insurance in New York, these policies may not be issued until the child to be insured is fully 10 years of age.

A new infantile 20-year payment life policy is being introduced, as is an infantile whole life (paid-up at age 70) policy with a commencing premium of 15 cents which will be issued in New York only. There is no change in the premium rates and benefits for plans which are continued.

The maximum amount of weekly premium industrial insurance in force on one life at actual ages over 14½ will remain at $1,500. The total amount of insurance (all kinds in force in all companies) at actual ages 10 to 14½ will also remain unchanged. Not more than $500 will be issued in any one year at ages over 10. The limit of amount of insurance (all kinds) in force in all companies for children under age 10 (actual age) has been set by statute at $400. This new statutory limit will, in general, limit the maximum amount of weekly premium in all companies at ages under 10 to fifteen cents.

New policy forms have been prepared under which provision has been made for a named beneficiary to receive the proceeds. The right to change the beneficiary is automatically reserved in the policy.

The intermediate monthly premium industrial policy will be discontinued. In its place, will be issued an intermediate monthly premium policy. New forms have been prepared which include the ordinary dividend and loan provisions. The interest rate on policy loans has been reduced to 5 percent payable at the end of the year.

The premium rates for intermediate monthly premium policies issued on the whole life and 20-year payment life plans are the same as for the present intermediate monthly premium industrial policies. The premium rates at most ages for 20 year endowment policies have been slightly increased over the present rates for intermediate monthly premium industrial policies. There has been no change in the non-forfeiture values under any of the plans issued, except that cash and paid-up values have been made available earlier.

Bargain Refusal Main Contention

MILWAUKEE.—All charges against the Prudential except those covering refusal to bargain with a labor union were dropped by the International Union of Life Insurance Agents before close of the hearing conducted here by the Wisconsin state labor relations board on charges of unfair labor practices brought against the company by the union.

The complaint also alleged the company interfered with rights of its industrial employees to organize and kept them under continuous surveillance in the industrial offices at Milwaukee, Racine and Kenosha. S. N. Moe, regional director of the board, who presided as examiner, said the issue had narrowed down to the question of refusal to bargain and the company's counsel had reserved right to present additional testimony up to Dec. 22. Counsel for the company and union were ordered to file briefs.

Attending the hearing were J. P. Mackin, second vice-president Prudential; H. H. Harris, vice-president, and C. M. Shanks, solicitor general. C. B. Quarles, Milwaukee attorney, also represented the company.

Prudential officials in the hearing admitted the company refused to bargain with the union and said it would continue to do so. They claimed the company did not come under jurisdiction of the state labor act and bargaining with the international union would be impractical because the union is organized chiefly in Wisconsin while the Prudential is a national organization. It was also pointed out the company had no evidence or knowledge the union represented a majority of the employees.

Union officials testified the vast majority of agents in the three areas were members of the independent union. Joseph Simon, Milwaukee, international union president, testified 256 out of 260 agents engaged in industrial policy work for the company in the three cities were union members.

Metropolitan Meet in Chicago

Metropolitan Life managers in Illinois met in Chicago for a territorial meeting with A. T. Schussler, superintendent of agencies, and S. D. Risley, assistant superintendent of agencies, of the Great Lakes territory.

The Louis F. Paret agency in Philadelphia and Camden, N. J., for the Provident Mutual Life is holding a turkey contest with the force divided into three groups, the "Veterans," the "Three to Five Year Group" and the "One and Two Year Group." So far the younger group is ahead.

LEGAL RESERVE FRATERNALS

Williams to Head Equitable Reserve

NEENAH, WIS.—Norton J. Williams of Neenah, for the last 12 years supreme vice-president of the Equitable Reserve, has been elected supreme president of the life fraternal to succeed the late Judge John C. Karel, president for the past 18 years.

Dr. George H. Williamson, chief medical examiner of the Equitable Reserve for the last 20 years, has been named vice-president to succeed Mr. Williams.

In the 41 years of its existence, the Equitable Reserve has had only four changes in the office of president.

Mr. Williams has been active in the Equitable Reserve since 1918 when he was elected Wisconsin state president. He was named a supreme trustee in 1922, and vice-president in 1926. He was in the sale promotion department of a machine manufacturer for 13 years and sales manager of a printing concern for four years. He served as a supervisor and chairman of the Dane county board.

He is a past district governor of Wisconsin and northern Michigan Kiwanis and former Wisconsin president of Moose. He is one of the outstanding fraternalists of the country, active in the National Fraternal Congress, whose meetings he has addressed. He was one of the prime movers in organization of the N. F. C. Fraternal Field Managers Association.

Dr. Williamson has been chief medical examiner since 1918, and has resided in Neenah since 1912. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan medical course and established a fine record as physician and surgeon for the C. & N. W. railway and Kimberly-Clark Company, paper manufacturers.

Lutheran Brotherhood Not to Raise Premium Rates

No premium rate change is contemplated by the Lutheran Brotherhood, it was announced. The dividend schedule is to be maintained in 1939.

"Our interest earnings are approximately the same as last year. Our mortality may be slightly higher, but we do not anticipate any change whatsoever in our dividend schedule. With conditions as above stated, there is no occasion for a change in rates.

"We might also state that in addition to our maintaining our dividend schedule, we have made substantial increases in our surplus from year to year.

"As to our ability to pay 5 percent on dividends left to accumulate, the mere fact that we have increased our surplus substantially each year besides maintaining our dividend scale and paid interest at 5 percent on dividend accumulations, should be real proof of our stability."

Cites Danger of Specifying Ground for Denying Liability

Paul E. Price, in addressing the meeting of the Chicago Life Insurance Lawyers Club Tuesday evening asserted that declining liability on a specific ground in Illinois is hazardous from the insurer's standpoint if it should afterward develop that other grounds of denial of liability make themselves apparent to the company.

While the company is not required to assign a reason for declining liability, if it does specify the ground upon which it is declining liability, it waives all other grounds and will not be heard after litigation is commenced to assert other and different grounds of defense, he observed.

New Men Visit Home Office

CINCINNATI.—Union Central Life held the sixth of a series of new agents' meetings at its home office. Four such meetings are held a year. There is no set program for the two-day meetings. The purpose is to acquaint qualified new men with home office personnel and routine. A minimum of $50,000 production is required for eligibility, and the agent must be producing on a basis of $100,000 annually. An agent who has represented the company nine months must have $75,000 minimum. There are usually about 12 men qualifying for each meeting. The men are taken through the various home office departments and meet home executives in an informal, friendly fashion.

Warns Against Wrecking Programs by Bank Loans

"He desires to borrow $18,000. It becomes necessary for him to assign all his policies. Remember that he has a program all worked out by a competent insurance man. Included in the policies are settlement option provisions that are more liberal than companies will now write. How is this change to be put through by the bank?"

"Most banks will not accept anything but absolute assignments. That means the exclusion of optional provisions. Some banks will accept collateral assignments. That invites a great deal of trouble in the future in the event of a claim. Other banks will accept changes of beneficiary. Some insurance companies will use either absolute or collateral assignments, some will do neither but will change the beneficiary only. Some will pay on evidence of debt. Some will not regard debts at all but will pay on assignment."

Mr. Hirschfeld suggested the following questions for an agent to ask the bank where one of his clients contemplates borrowing from a bank on his life insurance policies:

"What is the minimum loan you make? The maximum loan? What rate of interest do you charge? Does your rate vary with the amount of the Assuming that one company has paid the loan in full, what happens to your control of the rest of the proceeds? Will it be paid in one sum or as provided for by the modes of settlement? Assuming also that the original beneficiary, who is the wife, dies with the insured in a common disaster and the contingent beneficiaries are his minor children, will they receive the proceeds from the insurance company or from your institution? What assurance will my client have on this point?"

Mr. Hirschfeld is the leading producer of the National Life for last month and for the year to date. The Bender agency though affiliating with the National Life only last July, now ranks third among the company's agencies.

Sales Ideas and Suggestions

Supervising Supervisors Is Expounded by Elliott

Several important functions of agency supervisors were discussed by J. C. Elliott, general agent Penn Mutual, Newark, in a talk on "Supervising Supervisors" at a meeting of the New York Managers Association. A good supervisor, he said, never can be paid what he is worth. Mr. Elliott urged that supervisors, for the sake of their possible development into general agents and managers, be permitted to operate as unit managers, handling their units like miniature general agencies.

He should be informed about value of space his unit occupies, rental, secretarial expense, stamps, stationery, telephone service, fixed charge for cashier's department service; the supervisors compensation, and other items of overhead, then led to relate premium income and production of himself and his unit to such charges, Mr. Elliott said.

Analysis of Unit Cost

Knowing the average premium per $1,000 of the agency, and the rate in dollars per $1,000 which the general agent can pay for supervision, the supervisor should be shown the gross volume needed to cover his unit cost. His first function is to recruit sufficient manpower of average production ability to feel that he is a going concern.

The supervisor's second function is proper training of this manpower. He should be led to quick appreciation that there are limits to the number of men over which he can efficiently divide his time, and necessity of careful selection, adequate training and early determination of aptitude of his recruits for the business.

Insist on Production

"The third major function of the supervisor is the supervision of his manpower," Mr. Elliott said. "This begins, in my opinion, with your insistence upon a definite volume of personal production, say somewhere between $175,000 and $200,000 of paid life insurance, representing the sale of 20 to 30 lives. You are now assuring yourself that your supervisor knows how to prospect efficiently, because you recognize he is not going to have much time for this job. You also are assuring yourself, that he will be abreast of current objections and public acceptance of certain types of contracts. Further, he will be in an excellent position to enjoy prestige with his agents, because of the ability to do it himself, to say nothing of the fact that it will augment his salary.

"Likewise, he will be less hesitant about field work with his agents, better appreciative of their problems and reluctant to cut in on their compensation by insisting upon split commission. He will come to a realization sooner, too, of the necessity of developing his agents as self-sustaining individuals rather than as learners in his desire to free his own time for extra compensation.

Warns Against Losing Time

"In all of the foregoing procedure, you will find it easier to show him the danger in using mechanical forms of supervision, in hours spent in preparation of illustrations, and all the other mechanical duties which compete for his time, which after all can be best used in front of a suspect or prospect.

"So, finally, we come to the checks and balances which may be employed to assist you in overseeing the activities of this supervisor. Set aside in every week a definite day and hour or two when he joins with you or if there is more than one of him when all join together to review the week's results, to plan your agency meetings, and to discuss with him every intimate problem of your agency which you are not barred by company regulations from doing. If he understands the many problems which confront you, and especially if he is thoroughly familiar with the home office supervision to which you are subject, and especially if he realizes what your personal compensation amounts to, he will in my opinion, give you every possible support and loyalty.

Mechanical Plan

"Mechanically, I have found that when this man first assumes a position as supervisor, a simple daily report sheet, upon which he notes the hours spent in office detail, the hours spent in office consultation with agents, the hours spent in recruiting activity, the hours spent in personal production and the hours spent in field work with agents is very desirable. In the first place, if you believe as we do, in daily time control and plan sheet reports from agents, you will find that he will do a better job of getting such reports from his agents if he in turn is in the position of having to turn one in himself.

"I would recommend that a quarterly analysis of this man's unit progress be prepared by you from your office records, which will show him as closely as possible the progress his unit is making towards self-sufficiency; the cost of the production of the volume secured from all the manpower in his unit; the cost of volume secured from his remaining manpower, and the cost of the volume secured from manpower no longer under contract; the cash premiums collected in the period and the relation of all of this to his unit expense."

Mr. Elliott exhibited a specimen of the "supervisory review" which he has found works out well, in this case covering a period of five months. It is:

Seven Success Steps Are Told by Berwick

TORONTO—In an address on "The Magic in Underwriting," at luncheon of the Life Underwriters' Association here, H. B. Berwick, supervisor of field service Manufacturers Life, said the consensus of successful life underwriters is that the way to success is by use of certain fundamentals:

- "1—Seek constantly new prospects. He suggested use of the 'endless chain' method by means of which present prospects lead the way to new prospects.
- "2—Approach men interested.
- "3—Converse convincingly.
- "4—Retain clients' friendships.
- "5—Conduct personal affairs wisely.

The man who is looked upon in his community as a substantial business man of sound judgment has a decided asset. An underwriter's own insurance is the real barometer of his belief in what he is selling. If one cannot overcome his own objections, how can he overcome those of one's prospect.

"6—Improve knowledge of insurance services. Without knowledge even the most energetic worker is not going to achieve the success he hopes for, but knowledge is power only when it is converted into action. To succeed in the life insurance business one must turn a deaf ear to destructive thoughts and conversely welcome constructive thoughts.

"7—Work systematically. Everything else but the time spent face to face with prospects is preparatory."

Says Outside Activities Pay

BOSTON—In "Finding and Approaching a Market," C. Preston Dawson of the Beers & Dawson agency

Survey of Young Agents Shows Hard Work Pays

KANSAS CITY—Study of results obtained by agents in their first year has been completed by Walter Cluff, educational director Kansas City Life, 2,607 hours of work being covered. The young agents made 2,499 calls, had 1,059 interviews, paid for 114 applications for total volume $168,449 and total premium collection $4,305.32.

Average application was $1,477; average premium per $1,000 was $25.63. Time required per $1,000 was 15 hours; 2.4 calls to secure an interview, and 9.2 interviews for an application.

The study proved conclusively, Mr. Cluff said, that a man who will work at the job of selling life insurance will make more money than the majority of men in his locality are making today.

New England Mutual Life, New York City, told the Boston Life Underwriters Association at the December meeting, the underwriter must select prospects who are insurable, spend less than their income and be met with a favorable approach. Agents are mistaken who believe they can't afford to engage in activities outside life insurance. Mr. Dawson said. It pays to take part in church activities, parent-teachers associations and the like. Many prospects thus are secured. As to not having time, it doesn't take more than one night a month to be a director of the Y. M. C. A., parent-teachers association, community fund or Boy Scouts. Agents who dislike to solicit friends made in such contacts do not have a proper responsibility for their friends or have not mastered the technique of breaking the ice with them, he said.

Prospect Turns on Group; Gets Pledges for $115,000

"How many of you feel you have enough life insurance properly to secure your wife and family?" queried Hal Crouch of Tulsa, addressing the Oklahoma City Association of Life Underwriters. No hands went up. "How many of you feel that if you inhaled less nicotine—played less golf—etc., you could not increase your life insurance program?" No hands showed. "Then don't be surprised at the answer you get from many of your prospects," he said.

Mr. Crouch is a leading attorney of the Tulsa association. He turned the tables on the underwriters. "Now, you have all admitted that you have not enough insurance—and can afford to buy more—so just write on the card you find on your table, the amount you pledge to take out before Jan. 1, 1939." When added, the amount pledged totaled $115,000.

"How can you expect to sell anything you are not sold on yourself? The reason you are not sold is because you have not studied it enough to appreciate the real value of the very thing you are trying to sell your prospects."

The annual sales congress will be held Feb. 3.

Use Psychology on One's Own Attitudes

Isadore Segall, Southland Life, Dallas, speaking to the San Antonio (Texas) Association of Life Underwriters on "Life Insurance as a Career," stated habits, profitable and unprofitable, are a matter of cultivation. Applying the principle of cultivating a correct and profitable habit, Mr. Segall urged life men quit talking in thousand units and quote monthly income for a specified time. A prospect refused to consider a $1,000 policy, but when it was changed to units of $50 a month for three years bought $1,740.

He referred to the emphasis placed on psychology to control the other man's mind and said this idea had not proved successful. He suggested that life men apply psychology to control of their own attitudes and reactions so that they might obtain best results for prospects.

Mr. Segall urged that life insurance salesmen use simple language freed from all technical terms so the prospect may have a clear picture of what life insurance does. He stated the rate book is full of romance. Selling life insurance he defined as an art and science, and he asked his hearers to learn the art of selling.

Why People Buy Insurance

J. S. Drewry, Cincinnati general agent of the Mutual Benefit Life, in a talk to the Columbus Association of Life Underwriters said that any one who wishes to succeed in writing life insurance may do so through hard work, provided he has knowledge of the business, skill, control of his time and prestige. People buy life insurance to get results, he said, and he listed the following reasons for investing in life insurance: To underwrite a capital account, which can be done in no other way; obtain desirable property; obtain property that can be easily transferred to another without loss, and to obtain the benefit of a trusteeship. Life insurance, he asserted, is the best form of property management, and calamity, either general or personal, cannot harm it. It is the best form of investment, he asserted, when death occurs.

PACIFIC COAST AND MOUNTAIN

Competition for Post of California Commissioner

Charles R. Detrick, California insurance commissioner from 1925 to 1929, whose activities in connection with the old International Life brought him nationwide recognition and criticism, is a candidate for reappointment to the office under Governor-elect Olson. Mr. Detrick, a life-long Democrat, has held several state offices as appointee of Republican governors.

A group of San Francisco insurance men and outsiders have formed a special campaign committee to stimulate Governor Olson's interest in Mr. Detrick who has been more recently deputy state building and loan commissioner.

Signs of increasing competition for the post of commissioner under the new Democratic administration are becoming more apparent each day, yet strong support is being placed behind Rex B. Goodcell, who was appointed in July for a four year term by retiring Governor Merriam. Mr. Goodcell's appointment has not yet been confirmed by the state senate. The senate is overwhelmingly conservative and ordinarily might be expected to confirm Commissioner Goodcell. However, there is conjecture as to how the senators will vote in view of the new type of administration expected under the new governor, who has been characterized as a super-liberal.

Three Write Over $100,000

Ernest Buchanan, agent of the State Life of Indiana in California, wrote 105 applications for $149,750 during November. Two other members of the California agency exceed $100,000—they were M. M. Adler of San Francisco who wrote $163,000 and Manager Arthur J. Hill who wrote $154,000. Agency's total volume was in excess of $1,000,000, the best November since 1932.

Veterans Meet in Salt Lake

SALT LAKE CITY—A luncheon was given by William A. Carter, general agent Penn Mutual Life, to members of the Deans' Club, an organization of veteran western life underwriters. Personal experiences in the business, were related. The Deans' Club was organized at Salt Lake in 1936, with John D. Spencer, New York Life, president. A count taken at the luncheon disclosed that the seven veterans had expended a total of 212 years in the life insurance business; that their ages totaled 454 years, and that they had written business in excess of $30,000,000.

Flynn to Aid Producers

John L. Flynn, former deputy attorney-general of California who handled all the litigation in connection with the reorganization of the Pacific Mutual Life, and who recently entered private practice, has been retained by the newly organized Associated Insurance Producers of California. Mr. Flynn will at the outset aid in the preparation of the proposed amendments to the agents and brokers qualification law of California.

Keesling Will Give Full Time to the West Coast

F. V. Keesling, Sr., who has been vice-president and general counsel of the West Coast Life and now becomes its president, will give his entire time to the company and will be at the home office. His law firm continues as it has been. His son, F. V. Keesling, Jr., assistant general counsel, remains with the law firm. Mr. Keesling was in New York attending the meeting of the Association of Life Insurance Counsel and the Life Presidents Association annual convention. From there he went to Des Moines to attend the meeting of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners. He is one of the outstanding men on the coast, one who has done much for the San Francisco community, is prominent in civic and political life and as head of the West Coast Life is assured of a highly intelligent and successful administration.

New directors appointed are Dr. Ivan C. Heron, who succeeds Dr. M. O. Austin as medical director; Harry J. Stewart, newly elected vice-president and manager of agencies; John C. Veach, the company's counsel in Oregon and George D. Clark Jr., who succeeds his father. Retiring President Victor Etienne Jr., remains as a director as does John A. Koster, Carlos C. Warner, George U. Hind, Charles H. Lamberon and Byron Mauzy.

The finance committee is being consolidated with the executive committee, which will consist of President Keesling, First vice-president Gordon Thomson, Mr. Stewart, Carlos C. Warner, secretary and Mr. Clark.

Brust Is Well Known

Charles K. Brust, who has become manager of the Guardian Life at Los Angeles, is well known in the city. S. K. Lehman, well known Guardian Life agent, becomes supervisor. Carl H. Von Breton, who had been co-manager for 16 years with Mr. Brust, felt it necessary to retire on account of ill health. Superintendent of Agencies Frank Weidenborner and Pacific Coast Supervisor N. F. Davis after making the change at Los Angeles, visited San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and the new Oakland, Cal., office.

MANAGEMENT

Preparing Pittsburgh Slate

PITTSBURGH—A testimonial to D. W. Hooton, associate general agent State Mutual Life and president of the club featured the December meeting of the Pittsburgh Supervisors Club. He was presented a jigsaw for his home workshop. A nominating committee was appointed to select a slate for election at the annual meeting in January. In the absence of Holgar J. Johnson, general agent Penn Mutual, president National Association of Life Underwriters, who was scheduled to speak but was unable to attend, discussion was held on "Raising Prestige for the Agent."

Dr. Verne Steward conducted a seminar on pre-selection of prospective agents. Steacy E. Webster, general agent Provident Mutual, president agencies committee, was in charge.

Agents Do Office Work First

Paul C. Kaul, Topeka district agent Connecticut Mutual Life, trains agents by employing a prospective agent in his office in detail work on a salary basis. His duties consist of a limited amount of correspondence work, telephone calls and studying the rudiments of programming and information in the rate book. Mr. Kaul has found that it takes from three to six months to properly prepare the new man for writing insurance. Usually the recruit becomes so enthusiastic during his apprenticeship that he is most anxious to get out into the field.

Joint Meeting in Portland

PORTLAND, ORE.—At the joint life meeting of Portland Life Managers and of Puget Sound Life Managers Robert N. Latta, cashier Lincoln National Life, spoke on "The Front Office"; Paul Green of Aetna Life, on "Merchandising Plans"; Lawrence Bates, Mutual Benefit general agent, "Men—When and How to Get Them"; Hugh S. Bell on "Agency Gas and Oil."

Christmas Party in Milwaukee

The Life Managers & General Agents Association of Milwaukee is holding a Christmas party Dec. 16. The annual meeting and election of officers will be held in January.

Ohio Post Still Undecided

D. E. Morgan of Cleveland, former city manager, has declined appointment as director of commerce tendered him by Governor-elect Bricker of Ohio. The insurance division is in the department of commerce and the opinion prevails appointment of an insurance superintendent will not be made until the commerce director is named. Action soon is expected as it is reported major appointments will be made by the time the governor assumes his duties Jan. 9. R. R. Beetham of Cadiz, banker and former maker of the Ohio house, and former Senator Vernon Metcalf, Marietta, have been prominently mentioned as candidates for director of commerce.

SOME NOTES, FROM OUR WEEKLY PUBLICATION, THAT MAY INTEREST YOU

A Brilliant Record

In all life insurance circles, one of the most outstanding records in uninterrupted weekly production has been made by a representative of the Equitable at Grand Island, Nebraska — our own George Cowton. For nineteen years, George has turned in at least one application every week. In one day he established a record of 122 applications!

APPLAUSE FOR WOMEN

Associated with the Equitable as agents there are at present more than 1,000 women. The insurance they placed last year aggregated many millions. Their achievements are perhaps best illustrated by the 168 Club membership qualifications for 1937, each representing at least $100,000 of insurance written during the year. Fifteen qualified for the Quarter-Million Club; six for the $350,000 Corps; two wrote Half a Million or more. The total paid production of these 168 women Club members for the year was $27,621,927.

A HOUSE THAT COMMISSIONS BUILT

John B. Thieman, Woodward Agency, Cincinnati, describes his delightful home as "a direct product of my efforts in representing the great Equitable for a quarter of a century, so that during my declining years, my wife and I might have a roof over our heads."

Now that he is in his eightieth year, Mr. Thieman is enjoying the full reward of his twenty-five years' work with the Society, of which he is very proud. He is still an active producer.

When Frank X. Shields recently got back into life insurance harness (with the Ott Agency, New York) after two years of star tennis-playing and movie-making, his first client was Michael Bartlett.

His approach to this popular singer of radio and screen, who recently starred in "The Three Waltzes," was based on pointing out new values in old possessions — and both agent and prospect became so enthusiastic about the Equitable policy the latter already had, that they increased it considerably.

"I never appreciated my life insurance so much as now," says Mr. Bartlett, "since my good friend, Frank Shields, pointed out the additional values to be found therein. I know of nothing with the same degree of security that can take its place."
